

SOC Public Communication Temporary Faculty Search AY 2010-2011

The Public Communication Division of the School of Communication at American University is seeking candidates to fill a full-time temporary faculty position at the rank of Assistant Professor, to begin Fall 2010. Applicants should be able to teach professional and/or theory-based courses, both undergraduate and graduate, in public relations or related communication fields.

The School: The School of Communication offers a broad range of undergraduate, graduate and non-degree programs that make full use of Washington, D.C., and cover every area of communication studies, including public communication, journalism and visual media. The School of Communication has 900 undergraduate and 300 graduate students in visual media, journalism, and public communication programs. American University is a private, co-educational university with more than 11,000 students. For more information on the school check our website at: <http://soc.american.edu>

Responsibilities: Teaching responsibilities comprise a six-course load per year, including undergraduate and graduate courses in full-time and weekend programs. All faculty members are expected to advise students and participate in school and university activities and service.

Qualifications: A proven record of professional experience in one or more of the following areas: public relations, strategic communication, political communication, social marketing; evidence of excellence in teaching at the college level. MA or other advanced degree required.

Salary: Salary is negotiable, depending on qualifications and experience.

American University is an AA/EEO institution, committed to a diverse faculty, staff, and student body. Women and minority candidates are strongly encouraged to apply.

Application Materials: Letter of application, curriculum vitae, and names of three reference should be sent to:

Public Communication Search
American University
School of Communication
4400 Massachusetts Ave., NW
Washington, D.C. 20016-8017

Or transmitted via email to jweber@american.edu. Review of applications begins May 7, 2010.

