

Chair of the Public Relations Department

Syracuse University's S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications seeks a Chair for the Public Relations Department—one of the most highly-regarded programs in the United States.

The successful applicant will have a teaching, research and service record appropriate for hiring at the level of Associate or Full Professor. The successful applicant will start July 2013.

The Chair teaches three courses yearly, both undergraduate and Master's courses in Public Relations. Past professional experience in Public Relations is essential. A Master's is required; Ph.D. is preferred. Rank is open and negotiable.

The Chair will schedule classes, mentor junior faculty in teaching and research, hire and supervise adjuncts, advise undergraduate and graduate students, and work with the School's administrators to further the Newhouse School's professionally-oriented mission.

The Chair will serve as the Director of the Public Relations Professional Master's program, and puts a public face on the department at all events. Fundraising experience is desirable.

Two Tenure-Track positions in Public Relations

The S. I. Newhouse School of Public Communications at Syracuse University invites applications for two tenure-track positions in Public Relations: one at the Assistant Professor level, and the other at the Assistant/Associate Professor level.

Candidates must be able to teach undergraduate and/or graduate courses in public relations. Ability to teach executive education courses is a plus. Candidates must have a Doctorate in communication or a related field, or will complete all requirements for the degree prior to appointment. Candidates should have or be developing an active scholarly agenda and share our commitment to elevating the research profile of the Public Relations Department. Professional public relations experience is a plus, as is experience in international public relations.
